

Statement to the Security Council by Adama Dieng, Special Adviser on the Prevention of Genocide, on his visit to South Sudan

UN Office of the Special Adviser on the Prevention of Genocide

17 November 2016

On 17 November, the Special Adviser on the Prevention of Genocide, Adama Dieng, briefed the Security Council on the situation in South Sudan following recent developments in the country, including reports of targeted ethnic violence. The Special Adviser urged the Security Council and Member States of the region to unite and take action, and he also provided the Council with recommendations on how to prevent the possible genocide as most criteria for such atrocities are already in place.
