

Civil Society Report on Development, Human Rights, Peace and Security, Philanthropic and Service-Based Humanitarianism Organisations Canadian Centre for the Responsibility to Protect 9 May 2012 (...) This report aims to provide information and analysis on the ways in which civil society organizations (CSOs) have engaged with the norm of

Responsibility to Protect

(

R2P

). Since the proclamation of

R2P

in 2001 and its adoption in by one hundred and fifty states in 2005, civil society organizations have paid increasing attention to

R2P

. Several civil society organizations, such as the Global Centre for Responsibility to Protect and the International Coalition for Responsibility to Protect, have formed with a mandate specifically focused on

R2P

. These organizations, which are a collaborative enterprise between numerous CSOs, have significantly increased the level of CSO engagement with

R2P

. These developments, in conjunction with the proclamation of UN Resolution 1973 authorizing a no-fly zone over Libya on March 17th, 2011, have intensified interest in amongst civil society groups in recent years.

R2P

(...)

Further sections include:

Research Methodology

Peace and Security Organizations

Human Rights Organizations

Development Organizations

Philanthropic Organizations

Service-Based Humanitarian Organizations

ICRtoP Organizations

Quantitative Data

Read the full publication

.