

“If Not Now, When?”: The Responsibility to Protect, the Fate of the Rohingya and the Future of Human Rights

The Global Centre for the Responsibility to Protect

10 January 2019

Simon Adams, the Executive Director of the Global Centre for the Responsibility to Protect examines the international community's commitment to the Responsibility to Protect principle, using the UN Security Council's paralysis over Burma, and the case of the Gambia, where an atrocity was prevented. He concludes that a mobilized international community can make the difference in its implementation.

To read the full paper, please click here .