

John Prendergast and John Norris
13 January 2009

Enough's latest strategy paper, "Obama, Africa, and Peace", argues that a renewed emphasis on diplomacy and peacemaking is the critical difference between simply managing the crises in Sudan, Eastern Congo, and Somalia, and ending them. ()

"Because expectations are so high throughout Africa, President Obama will have an unprecedented opportunity to forge a global commitment to end the deadliest wars in the world. Africa's wars require outside-the-box thinking in this era of diminishing resources. ()

Source: <http://www.enoughproject.org/publications/obama-africa-and-peace>

Full Report: <http://www.enoughproject.org/files/publications/Jan1309ObamaAfricaPeace.pdf>